During the course of the last 10 years, in violation of all norms of decency and U.S. and international laws, the U.S. government has denied visitation rights to Adriana Perez (left) and Olga Salanueva (right), the wives of Gerardo Hernández and Rene González, two of the Cuban Five. Other family members of the Five have also been denied visitation rights for long stretches. During 2007 the U.S. government granted visas to only two of the family members of these five men.

Amnesty International, the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detention, members of the European Parliament, 13 California Mayors, and many others have called on U.S. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice to grant, on humanitarian grounds, temporary visitation visas to these two Cuban women, so that they may visit their husbands, currently incarcerated in U.S. prisons.

Come learn about this long-standing abuse of human rights that adds to the injustice heaped upon five Cuban men for the "crime" of preventing right-wing exile groups from carrying out terrorist attacks against Cuba organized by extremists in Miami.
